For athletes' green belt or higher, we have been practicing nunchaku. This additional mental and physical strength training comes with responsibility. A “nunchaku” is a traditional martial arts tool consisting of two rods or sticks connected at one end by a short chain or rope. The practice tool we use is padded and all athletes will be required to respect our code of conduct when practicing the nunchaku:

“I shall practice in a safe area that my Taekwondo coach or parent(s) approve, and I shall never use my nunchaku in a way that is inappropriate, unkind, or destructive. If I break this code of conduct, my TKD rank of green or higher may be held by my TKD coach indefinitely or until I have proven to be trusted in upholding this code of conduct.”

This optional training is not required, yet we request that parents help us to uphold this policy. If you are interested in purchasing a pair of nunchaku, the cost is $20.

When an athlete holds a level of high green belt or higher and is in their fifth-grade year or higher, he/she has the opportunity to join the S.T.O.R.M. (Special Team Of Role Models) program. During regular class, these leaders will be asked to demonstrate their skills at the head of the class while directing, supporting, encouraging, and learning their own material. If an athlete elects to join this program, he/she will be given a S.T.O.R.M. patch to wear on their uniform. There are four levels of S.T.O.R.M. Ranked as follows:

Level One consistently encourages, supports, and displays good knowledge and skills.

Level Two consistently encourages, supports, displays good knowledge and skills while role- modeling the six tenants of black belt: modesty, courtesy, integrity, perseverance, self-control, and indomitable spirit.

Level Three instructs a group of students with specific material on their own.

Level Four, if all the above accomplishments are met and carried through well, parents are the sole authority if a S.T.O.R.M. member achieves level four. A role-model of this level needs to demonstrate the above three levels outside of their regular practice. A role-model is someone who consistently displays the above characteristics in their community.

*Note: S.T.O.R.M. patches and levels will be issued during promotion exams. There is no charge for this program.
